INJUNCTION GRANTED

3 Charged in 'Bugging' Agree to Stay Away

Three men charged with "bugging" a California lawyer's Mayflower Hotel room early this month agreed in District Court yesterday not to snoop on the lawyer.

The charges were made by Malcolm T. Dungan in a civil trespass suit against John J. Frank, Oliver W. Angelone, and John W. Leon.

Mr. Dungan's lawyer, Paul R. Connolly, told Judge George L. Hart Jr. he was prepared to offer proof of electronic eavesdropping, but lawyer Edward L. Carey said on behalf of the three men that he would not oppose the injunction.

Mr. Carey has until next Wednesday to file an answer to the damage suit and a trial would be still later.

Mr. Connolly said he had 13 witnesses subpoenaed yesterday in case testimony were necessary, including employees of the Mayflower and the Federal Communications Commission, which has referred the case for possible criminal prosecution because its investigation showed that a tiny transmitter in the case was set to broadcast on a wave length reserved for air traffic.
